

HONORS TO ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

His Reception by the Merchants and Citizens.

MEETING AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Speeches by the Admiral, Captain Marshall, Peter Cooper and Others.

THE SERENADE LAST NIGHT,

By Admiral Farragut, the hero of New Orleans, Port Hudson and the Mississippi, was the object of a grand reception yesterday afternoon from the leading merchants and other distinguished citizens of this metropolis.

The affair was one of the most interesting of the kind that ever occurred in New York. The reception took place in the Chamber of Commerce, but was not confined to members of that body alone, merchants, lawyers, professors, military officers, clergymen and representatives from every class in the community having joined in doing honor to the gallant Farragut, whose brilliant exploits are destined to live forever on the pages of history. The invitation, which was signed by over one hundred well known citizens, was as follows:—

THE INVITATION.

TO REAR ADMIRAL DAVID FARRAGUT.

SIR:—The merchants and other citizens of New York are so familiar with your brilliant career in the public service, and so full of admiration for the noble character and the high appreciation of your personal and professional character. The whole country, and especially this commercial metropolis, owe you a large debt of gratitude for the skill and dauntless bravery with which, during a long life of public duty, you have illustrated and maintained the maritime rights of the nation; and for the signal ability, judgment and courage with which, in concert with other branches of the national force, you have sustained the authority of the government and recovered and defended national territory.

The undersigned have great pleasure in tendering you a cordial welcome on your return from the successful discharge of responsible duties, the results of which have given increased admiration for the navy and a new lustre to the national flag. In offering this expression of their cordial esteem, the undersigned request that you will graciously attend to the following invitation by appointing some convenient time to give your stay in this city, when you will allow them in person to assure you of the high respect and regard with which they are, your obedient servants.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

MORRIS H. GRINNELL, And Others.

Admiral Farragut's reply to this flattering invitation was couched in the following modest, appropriate language:—

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S REPLY.

ASTOR HOUSE, New York, Sept. 25, 1863.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind and courteous invitation, and am pleased to express my high appreciation of your character, conduct and services to our country during this untoward rebellion. I feel that I have been able to do much for the benefit of our beloved country and the glory of our arms. I can never feel that my fellow citizens owe me anything but respect and regard. I am always ready to extend to and receive from them, with sentiments of the kindest consideration. I have always endeavored to do my duty and to inspire those placed under my command with the same spirit, and it has pleased a kind Providence to prosper our exertions. I feel most grateful for the cordial and warm reception and appreciation of those exertions, and I will be most happy to meet my fellow citizens on Thursday, the 26th inst., at such hour and place as may be designated by the loyal citizens of New York.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

To Messrs. SUMNER, KERRY, &c.

The gathering at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon was the largest that has been seen in that building for many years. Every seat was occupied, and the lobbies and passages were crisscrossed with people standing up.

THE MEETING AND RECEPTION.

One o'clock in the afternoon was the time appointed for the reception to take place, and shortly after that hour the gallant Admiral entered the room, escorted by Mr. Charles Gould and General Prosper M. Wetmore. He was dressed in full uniform, and his appearance was the signal for a burst of applause which continued for several minutes, the entire assemblage rising to their feet to give fuller effect to the cheering. Admiral Farragut maintained perfect composure during this exceedingly complimentary demonstration, and merely bowed in acknowledgment of the honors conferred upon him.

As soon as some order of silence was restored General Wetmore called the meeting to order by nominating as the presiding officer Captain Charles H. Marshall.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

Captain MARSHALL then rose and said:—

GENTLEMEN:—I have to thank you for the honor conferred on me in selecting me to preside on this occasion. I regret that some gentlemen were unable to be here, but I am glad to see that all are here. I have been thinking of you from anything, and I certainly should not shrink from meeting a brother sailor. (Applause.) I have a letter to read to you, and which I will ask Mr. Gould to read.

Mr. Gould then read the letters given above; after which

The Chairman again rose and proceeded to introduce Admiral Farragut to the meeting. He said that Admiral Farragut was so thoroughly known to every one present, and, in fact, to every one in the country, that he need not be introduced as familiar as household words. Admiral Farragut had done so much to put down this accursed rebellion, in opening the great Mississippi to the country, that those present owed him a deep debt of gratitude, and no time or circumstances could ever efface it. (Cheers.) He hoped that there were present some gentlemen who would speak on that occasion, and do more justice to the subject than he could. He could only say that it made his heart feel good to meet Admiral Farragut, a brother sailor, and he was sure there was not a person present here in the country—not one certainly not in the world—who did not feel that he would not regret Admiral Farragut in the most cordial manner. (Cheers.) The speaker concluded by introducing Admiral Farragut, amid loud cheering.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S SPEECH.

On rising to respond the Admiral was greeted with long continued applause, after which he spoke as follows:—

I am not in the habit of making speeches, gentlemen, as you all know. I have nothing to say on this occasion, except that I am glad to be here, and that I have been able to do something for my country; and I have been able, through the assistance of my gallant officers and men, to accomplish anything for the great Republic. I have been able to do so under the great intervention of Providence, and it affords me great pleasure to meet on this occasion the citizens of this great metropolis. (Cheers.)

The Admiral then resumed his seat, and Mr. Gould said that it was not intended that there would be any eloquent speeches on this occasion. He knew every gentleman present wanted to know Admiral Farragut, and that Admiral Farragut in return would know every loyal man in the assemblage. (Cheers.)

PERSONAL OF PETER COOPER.

Mr. Peter Cooper was introduced and made some remarks. He said that he was introduced to the subject of justice to the subject, that he had a deep debt of gratitude to Admiral Farragut for what he had done for his country. He thought every heart present must be ready almost to burst with gratitude towards any one like the Admiral, who was the instrument of doing so much to sustain the great cause of our country in times like these. Admiral Farragut's work was a work that would go down into history as one of the greatest ever performed in any country, and which had done more, perhaps, to secure to our country the high honor due to the power of any other. (Applause.)

The ready bow of a stout gentleman, whom you might be able to throw all the glow and heat on the subject possible, would now take it up, for I confided his inability to do so.

PROFESSOR LIEBER'S SPEECH.

Professor FRANK LIEBER, of Columbia College, next spoke, and it seemed to him that they had shared the making from one another to another and that it had come to him. He must say, however, that he had come from one to another and that he had shared the making from one another to another and that it had come to him. He must say, however, that he had come from one to another and that he had shared the making from one another to another and that it had come to him.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S SPEECH.

On rising to respond the Admiral was greeted with long continued applause, after which he spoke as follows:—

I am not in the habit of making speeches, gentlemen, as you all know. I have nothing to say on this occasion, except that I am glad to be here, and that I have been able to do something for my country; and I have been able, through the assistance of my gallant officers and men, to accomplish anything for the great Republic. I have been able to do so under the great intervention of Providence, and it affords me great pleasure to meet on this occasion the citizens of this great metropolis. (Cheers.)

The Admiral then resumed his seat, and Mr. Gould said that it was not intended that there would be any eloquent speeches on this occasion. He knew every gentleman present wanted to know Admiral Farragut, and that Admiral Farragut in return would know every loyal man in the assemblage. (Cheers.)

GENERAL FOSTER'S DEPARTMENT.

News from Newbern, N. C.

The United States transport Charles Ogden, Captain Geo. W. Foster, on Monday, arrived at this port yesterday morning, bringing the mail and fifty soldiers on board from General Foster's army. There is nothing of importance from Newbern.

Interesting from the Interior—Reported Fighting in Raleigh, &c.

MR. SAMUEL R. GLEN'S DESPATCH.

NEWBORN, N. C., Sept. 18, 1863.

A number of rumors are in circulation about the situation of affairs in the interior. Last night a contraband came into our lines at Bachelor's creek, and reported that fighting was going on in Raleigh between the Unionists and the rebels. The previous reports concentrated three thousand soldiers from the Union army, and three thousand to the north of Raleigh, ready to advance to the assistance of their friends. Parties who have been sent into the rebel lines at their own request under a fortnight have returned, and their relations of the situation of the people are heartening.

The statement that the great mass of the people pray for the presence of the Union troops is confirmed, and it is stated also that the feeling has greatly increased within a couple of months, in consequence of the belief that the Unionists were about advancing for the purpose of effecting their deliverance. Deserters from Wilmington continue to flock in. Five came yesterday. They belong to North Carolina regiments, and reiterate the reports of others who have preceded them about the rebel situation of the North Carolina troops. Holden's outfit the Standard has been furnished with new type, and we soon expect to hear of its reappearance.

A BUREAU REPORT.

Is now sweeping over the three districts comprising this branch of Major General Foster's department. All the public functionaries are held to a strict accountability, and required to make prompt and satisfactory returns regarding the manner in which they discharge their several duties. The Chief Quartermaster, Captain R. C. Webster, is acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army. He is also acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army.

NEW YORK HERALD, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1863.—TRIPLE SHEET.

HONORS TO ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

His Reception by the Merchants and Citizens.

MEETING AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Speeches by the Admiral, Captain Marshall, Peter Cooper and Others.

THE SERENADE LAST NIGHT,

By Admiral Farragut, the hero of New Orleans, Port Hudson and the Mississippi, was the object of a grand reception yesterday afternoon from the leading merchants and other distinguished citizens of this metropolis.

The affair was one of the most interesting of the kind that ever occurred in New York. The reception took place in the Chamber of Commerce, but was not confined to members of that body alone, merchants, lawyers, professors, military officers, clergymen and representatives from every class in the community having joined in doing honor to the gallant Farragut, whose brilliant exploits are destined to live forever on the pages of history. The invitation, which was signed by over one hundred well known citizens, was as follows:—

THE INVITATION.

TO REAR ADMIRAL DAVID FARRAGUT.

SIR:—The merchants and other citizens of New York are so familiar with your brilliant career in the public service, and so full of admiration for the noble character and the high appreciation of your personal and professional character. The whole country, and especially this commercial metropolis, owe you a large debt of gratitude for the skill and dauntless bravery with which, during a long life of public duty, you have illustrated and maintained the maritime rights of the nation; and for the signal ability, judgment and courage with which, in concert with other branches of the national force, you have sustained the authority of the government and recovered and defended national territory.

The undersigned have great pleasure in tendering you a cordial welcome on your return from the successful discharge of responsible duties, the results of which have given increased admiration for the navy and a new lustre to the national flag. In offering this expression of their cordial esteem, the undersigned request that you will graciously attend to the following invitation by appointing some convenient time to give your stay in this city, when you will allow them in person to assure you of the high respect and regard with which they are, your obedient servants.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

MORRIS H. GRINNELL, And Others.

Admiral Farragut's reply to this flattering invitation was couched in the following modest, appropriate language:—

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S REPLY.

ASTOR HOUSE, New York, Sept. 25, 1863.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind and courteous invitation, and am pleased to express my high appreciation of your character, conduct and services to our country during this untoward rebellion. I feel that I have been able to do much for the benefit of our beloved country and the glory of our arms. I can never feel that my fellow citizens owe me anything but respect and regard. I am always ready to extend to and receive from them, with sentiments of the kindest consideration. I have always endeavored to do my duty and to inspire those placed under my command with the same spirit, and it has pleased a kind Providence to prosper our exertions. I feel most grateful for the cordial and warm reception and appreciation of those exertions, and I will be most happy to meet my fellow citizens on Thursday, the 26th inst., at such hour and place as may be designated by the loyal citizens of New York.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

To Messrs. SUMNER, KERRY, &c.

The gathering at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon was the largest that has been seen in that building for many years. Every seat was occupied, and the lobbies and passages were crisscrossed with people standing up.

THE MEETING AND RECEPTION.

One o'clock in the afternoon was the time appointed for the reception to take place, and shortly after that hour the gallant Admiral entered the room, escorted by Mr. Charles Gould and General Prosper M. Wetmore. He was dressed in full uniform, and his appearance was the signal for a burst of applause which continued for several minutes, the entire assemblage rising to their feet to give fuller effect to the cheering. Admiral Farragut maintained perfect composure during this exceedingly complimentary demonstration, and merely bowed in acknowledgment of the honors conferred upon him.

As soon as some order of silence was restored General Wetmore called the meeting to order by nominating as the presiding officer Captain Charles H. Marshall.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

Captain MARSHALL then rose and said:—

GENTLEMEN:—I have to thank you for the honor conferred on me in selecting me to preside on this occasion. I regret that some gentlemen were unable to be here, but I am glad to see that all are here. I have been thinking of you from anything, and I certainly should not shrink from meeting a brother sailor. (Applause.) I have a letter to read to you, and which I will ask Mr. Gould to read.

Mr. Gould then read the letters given above; after which

The Chairman again rose and proceeded to introduce Admiral Farragut to the meeting. He said that Admiral Farragut was so thoroughly known to every one present, and, in fact, to every one in the country, that he need not be introduced as familiar as household words. Admiral Farragut had done so much to put down this accursed rebellion, in opening the great Mississippi to the country, that those present owed him a deep debt of gratitude, and no time or circumstances could ever efface it. (Cheers.) He hoped that there were present some gentlemen who would speak on that occasion, and do more justice to the subject than he could. He could only say that it made his heart feel good to meet Admiral Farragut, a brother sailor, and he was sure there was not a person present here in the country—not one certainly not in the world—who did not feel that he would not regret Admiral Farragut in the most cordial manner. (Cheers.) The speaker concluded by introducing Admiral Farragut, amid loud cheering.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S SPEECH.

On rising to respond the Admiral was greeted with long continued applause, after which he spoke as follows:—

I am not in the habit of making speeches, gentlemen, as you all know. I have nothing to say on this occasion, except that I am glad to be here, and that I have been able to do something for my country; and I have been able, through the assistance of my gallant officers and men, to accomplish anything for the great Republic. I have been able to do so under the great intervention of Providence, and it affords me great pleasure to meet on this occasion the citizens of this great metropolis. (Cheers.)

The Admiral then resumed his seat, and Mr. Gould said that it was not intended that there would be any eloquent speeches on this occasion. He knew every gentleman present wanted to know Admiral Farragut, and that Admiral Farragut in return would know every loyal man in the assemblage. (Cheers.)

GENERAL FOSTER'S DEPARTMENT.

News from Newbern, N. C.

The United States transport Charles Ogden, Captain Geo. W. Foster, on Monday, arrived at this port yesterday morning, bringing the mail and fifty soldiers on board from General Foster's army. There is nothing of importance from Newbern.

Interesting from the Interior—Reported Fighting in Raleigh, &c.

MR. SAMUEL R. GLEN'S DESPATCH.

NEWBORN, N. C., Sept. 18, 1863.

A number of rumors are in circulation about the situation of affairs in the interior. Last night a contraband came into our lines at Bachelor's creek, and reported that fighting was going on in Raleigh between the Unionists and the rebels. The previous reports concentrated three thousand soldiers from the Union army, and three thousand to the north of Raleigh, ready to advance to the assistance of their friends. Parties who have been sent into the rebel lines at their own request under a fortnight have returned, and their relations of the situation of the people are heartening.

The statement that the great mass of the people pray for the presence of the Union troops is confirmed, and it is stated also that the feeling has greatly increased within a couple of months, in consequence of the belief that the Unionists were about advancing for the purpose of effecting their deliverance. Deserters from Wilmington continue to flock in. Five came yesterday. They belong to North Carolina regiments, and reiterate the reports of others who have preceded them about the rebel situation of the North Carolina troops. Holden's outfit the Standard has been furnished with new type, and we soon expect to hear of its reappearance.

A BUREAU REPORT.

Is now sweeping over the three districts comprising this branch of Major General Foster's department. All the public functionaries are held to a strict accountability, and required to make prompt and satisfactory returns regarding the manner in which they discharge their several duties. The Chief Quartermaster, Captain R. C. Webster, is acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army. He is also acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army.

NEW YORK HERALD, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1863.—TRIPLE SHEET.

HONORS TO ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

His Reception by the Merchants and Citizens.

MEETING AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Speeches by the Admiral, Captain Marshall, Peter Cooper and Others.

THE SERENADE LAST NIGHT,

By Admiral Farragut, the hero of New Orleans, Port Hudson and the Mississippi, was the object of a grand reception yesterday afternoon from the leading merchants and other distinguished citizens of this metropolis.

The affair was one of the most interesting of the kind that ever occurred in New York. The reception took place in the Chamber of Commerce, but was not confined to members of that body alone, merchants, lawyers, professors, military officers, clergymen and representatives from every class in the community having joined in doing honor to the gallant Farragut, whose brilliant exploits are destined to live forever on the pages of history. The invitation, which was signed by over one hundred well known citizens, was as follows:—

THE INVITATION.

TO REAR ADMIRAL DAVID FARRAGUT.

SIR:—The merchants and other citizens of New York are so familiar with your brilliant career in the public service, and so full of admiration for the noble character and the high appreciation of your personal and professional character. The whole country, and especially this commercial metropolis, owe you a large debt of gratitude for the skill and dauntless bravery with which, during a long life of public duty, you have illustrated and maintained the maritime rights of the nation; and for the signal ability, judgment and courage with which, in concert with other branches of the national force, you have sustained the authority of the government and recovered and defended national territory.

The undersigned have great pleasure in tendering you a cordial welcome on your return from the successful discharge of responsible duties, the results of which have given increased admiration for the navy and a new lustre to the national flag. In offering this expression of their cordial esteem, the undersigned request that you will graciously attend to the following invitation by appointing some convenient time to give your stay in this city, when you will allow them in person to assure you of the high respect and regard with which they are, your obedient servants.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

MORRIS H. GRINNELL, And Others.

Admiral Farragut's reply to this flattering invitation was couched in the following modest, appropriate language:—

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S REPLY.

ASTOR HOUSE, New York, Sept. 25, 1863.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind and courteous invitation, and am pleased to express my high appreciation of your character, conduct and services to our country during this untoward rebellion. I feel that I have been able to do much for the benefit of our beloved country and the glory of our arms. I can never feel that my fellow citizens owe me anything but respect and regard. I am always ready to extend to and receive from them, with sentiments of the kindest consideration. I have always endeavored to do my duty and to inspire those placed under my command with the same spirit, and it has pleased a kind Providence to prosper our exertions. I feel most grateful for the cordial and warm reception and appreciation of those exertions, and I will be most happy to meet my fellow citizens on Thursday, the 26th inst., at such hour and place as may be designated by the loyal citizens of New York.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

To Messrs. SUMNER, KERRY, &c.

The gathering at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon was the largest that has been seen in that building for many years. Every seat was occupied, and the lobbies and passages were crisscrossed with people standing up.

THE MEETING AND RECEPTION.

One o'clock in the afternoon was the time appointed for the reception to take place, and shortly after that hour the gallant Admiral entered the room, escorted by Mr. Charles Gould and General Prosper M. Wetmore. He was dressed in full uniform, and his appearance was the signal for a burst of applause which continued for several minutes, the entire assemblage rising to their feet to give fuller effect to the cheering. Admiral Farragut maintained perfect composure during this exceedingly complimentary demonstration, and merely bowed in acknowledgment of the honors conferred upon him.

As soon as some order of silence was restored General Wetmore called the meeting to order by nominating as the presiding officer Captain Charles H. Marshall.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

Captain MARSHALL then rose and said:—

GENTLEMEN:—I have to thank you for the honor conferred on me in selecting me to preside on this occasion. I regret that some gentlemen were unable to be here, but I am glad to see that all are here. I have been thinking of you from anything, and I certainly should not shrink from meeting a brother sailor. (Applause.) I have a letter to read to you, and which I will ask Mr. Gould to read.

Mr. Gould then read the letters given above; after which

The Chairman again rose and proceeded to introduce Admiral Farragut to the meeting. He said that Admiral Farragut was so thoroughly known to every one present, and, in fact, to every one in the country, that he need not be introduced as familiar as household words. Admiral Farragut had done so much to put down this accursed rebellion, in opening the great Mississippi to the country, that those present owed him a deep debt of gratitude, and no time or circumstances could ever efface it. (Cheers.) He hoped that there were present some gentlemen who would speak on that occasion, and do more justice to the subject than he could. He could only say that it made his heart feel good to meet Admiral Farragut, a brother sailor, and he was sure there was not a person present here in the country—not one certainly not in the world—who did not feel that he would not regret Admiral Farragut in the most cordial manner. (Cheers.) The speaker concluded by introducing Admiral Farragut, amid loud cheering.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S SPEECH.

On rising to respond the Admiral was greeted with long continued applause, after which he spoke as follows:—

I am not in the habit of making speeches, gentlemen, as you all know. I have nothing to say on this occasion, except that I am glad to be here, and that I have been able to do something for my country; and I have been able, through the assistance of my gallant officers and men, to accomplish anything for the great Republic. I have been able to do so under the great intervention of Providence, and it affords me great pleasure to meet on this occasion the citizens of this great metropolis. (Cheers.)

The Admiral then resumed his seat, and Mr. Gould said that it was not intended that there would be any eloquent speeches on this occasion. He knew every gentleman present wanted to know Admiral Farragut, and that Admiral Farragut in return would know every loyal man in the assemblage. (Cheers.)

GENERAL FOSTER'S DEPARTMENT.

News from Newbern, N. C.

The United States transport Charles Ogden, Captain Geo. W. Foster, on Monday, arrived at this port yesterday morning, bringing the mail and fifty soldiers on board from General Foster's army. There is nothing of importance from Newbern.

Interesting from the Interior—Reported Fighting in Raleigh, &c.

MR. SAMUEL R. GLEN'S DESPATCH.

NEWBORN, N. C., Sept. 18, 1863.

A number of rumors are in circulation about the situation of affairs in the interior. Last night a contraband came into our lines at Bachelor's creek, and reported that fighting was going on in Raleigh between the Unionists and the rebels. The previous reports concentrated three thousand soldiers from the Union army, and three thousand to the north of Raleigh, ready to advance to the assistance of their friends. Parties who have been sent into the rebel lines at their own request under a fortnight have returned, and their relations of the situation of the people are heartening.

The statement that the great mass of the people pray for the presence of the Union troops is confirmed, and it is stated also that the feeling has greatly increased within a couple of months, in consequence of the belief that the Unionists were about advancing for the purpose of effecting their deliverance. Deserters from Wilmington continue to flock in. Five came yesterday. They belong to North Carolina regiments, and reiterate the reports of others who have preceded them about the rebel situation of the North Carolina troops. Holden's outfit the Standard has been furnished with new type, and we soon expect to hear of its reappearance.

A BUREAU REPORT.

Is now sweeping over the three districts comprising this branch of Major General Foster's department. All the public functionaries are held to a strict accountability, and required to make prompt and satisfactory returns regarding the manner in which they discharge their several duties. The Chief Quartermaster, Captain R. C. Webster, is acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army. He is also acting with integrity and to make straight things which were before crooked, and to keep the rebel army from the aid of the rebel army.

NEW YORK HERALD, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1863.—TRIPLE SHEET.

HONORS TO ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

His Reception by the Merchants and Citizens.

MEETING AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Speeches by the Admiral, Captain Marshall, Peter Cooper and Others.

THE SERENADE LAST NIGHT,

By Admiral Farragut, the hero of New Orleans, Port Hudson and the Mississippi, was the object of a grand reception yesterday afternoon from the leading merchants and other distinguished citizens of this metropolis.

The affair was one of the most interesting of the kind that ever occurred in New York. The reception took place in the Chamber of Commerce, but was not confined to members of that body alone, merchants, lawyers, professors, military officers, clergymen and representatives from every class in the community having joined in doing honor to the gallant Farragut, whose brilliant exploits are destined to live forever on the pages of history. The invitation, which was signed by over one hundred well known citizens, was as follows:—

THE INVITATION.

TO REAR ADMIRAL DAVID FARRAGUT.

SIR:—The merchants and other citizens of New York are so familiar with your brilliant career in the public service, and so full of admiration for the noble character and the high appreciation of your personal and professional character. The whole country, and especially this commercial metropolis, owe you a large debt of gratitude for the skill and dauntless bravery with which, during a long life of public duty, you have illustrated and maintained the maritime rights of the nation; and for the signal ability, judgment and courage with which, in concert with other branches of the national force, you have sustained the authority of the government and recovered and defended national territory.

The undersigned have great pleasure in tendering you a cordial welcome on your return from the successful discharge of responsible duties, the results of which have given increased admiration for the navy and a new lustre to the national flag. In offering this expression of their cordial esteem, the undersigned request that you will graciously attend to the following invitation by appointing some convenient time to give your stay in this city, when you will allow them in person to assure you of the high respect and regard with which they are, your obedient servants.

D. G. LAFRANK, Rear Admiral.

MORRIS H. GRINNELL, And Others.

Admiral Farragut's reply to this flattering invitation was couched in the following modest, appropriate language:—

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S REPLY.

ASTOR HOUSE, New York, Sept. 25, 1863.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind and courteous invitation, and am pleased to express my high appreciation of your character, conduct and services to our country during this untoward rebellion. I feel that I have been able to do much for the benefit of our beloved country and the glory of our arms. I can never feel that my fellow citizens owe me anything but respect and regard. I am always ready to extend to and receive from them, with sentiments of the kindest consideration. I have always endeavored to do my duty and to inspire those placed under my command with the same spirit, and it has pleased a kind Providence to prosper our exertions. I feel most grateful for the cordial and warm reception and appreciation of those exertions, and I will be most happy to meet my fellow citizens on Thursday, the 26th inst., at such hour and place as may be designated by the loyal citizens of New York.